Patchwork of Queen's

Daniel Shaw

In these visualisations, Daniel Shaw reimagines a Leicester high street, Queen's Road, as a pedestrianised hub for local businesses, creatives and families to come together as a patchwork of community.

Taking inspiration from Leicester's rich history in the textile industry, the title 'Patchwork of Queens' makes reference to the bringing together of different pieces to create a more resilient whole.

Through the pedestrianisation of Queen's Road, the high street is strengthened by the creation of community spaces, and contributes to cleaner air and safer places for children.

Artist Bio

I am local Landscape Architect, currently completing a Master's in Landscape Architecture at Birmingham City University. I am interested in the power of design to bridge social barriers, combat climate change and create memorable experiences within the public realm.
